

EFFECt Tool: Self Assessment Version

Introduction

The EFFECt Tool has been designed to help institutional health partnerships to assess their current practice and how they embed change within institutions. Whilst there is substantial practice-based experience of institutional health partnerships, there are no existing frameworks or tools for measuring their effectiveness in sustaining change irrespective of the specific initiatives they are implementing.

This tool builds on existing evaluation frameworks and models from the health and development sectors with a particular focus on capacity development, implementation and institutional strengthening theories and proven practices. The EFFECt tool provides a robust framework that allows institutional health partnerships to assess and improve their own practice. It does not replace routine project monitoring and evaluation but can be used to complement it.

Health Partnerships between Northern and Southern countries aim to be equal and beneficial to both Institutions in the partnership. The EFFECt tool encourages both partners to reflect on and evaluate their roles within the partnership, moving away from the traditional expectation that the Northern Partner automatically leads the project and instead supports the notion of an equally balanced relationship/ equality in the partnership.

Instructions

The teams of each partner should complete the EFFECt tool.

The main aim of the EFFECt tool is for partners to engage in an in-depth internal discussion; thus, the tool is not scored for external use. As such, the questions allow and require both partners to be completely honest to ensure a useful and successful evaluation.

The EFFECt tool aims to evaluate the Quality of the Partnership WITHOUT focusing on the project objectives (for which you should have a separate monitoring and evaluation plan). Please keep this in mind when answering the questions.
